Excerpt: .even when that friendship might seem to cost the prince his own crown. Jonathan gave David his own royal garments, his sword and his bow, thus putting him in fitting dress for the royal court. It was among the highest marks of favor for an Oriental prince to give his robe or his sword to another. So Mordecai was clothed in the robe the king useth to wear, as a mark of the greatest honor. Esther 6: 8, 9. A similar incident is mentioned in early English history. Edmund Ironside and the first Danish king confirmed a peace by each putting on the other's robes and armor. The friendship of David and Jonathan is the finest example of true friendship to be found in the annals of our race. SPECIAL WORD STUDIES. Jonathan. The son of Saul, and the heir to the throne....
