Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: .more to add to this list, it will simplify our process of elimination and enable us to focus our attention upon the worthy. Nobody stirred. The reaction was nil. Father Coffey waited in silence to see what the others would say. They said nothing. They were back in the stone age. I couldn t quite get it all, said one of them afterwards. But I knew some one was throwing a marlinspike into the machinery. Father Coffey arose. He had not much patience with the professional uplifters. As a class, they did not seem genuine to him. Lady, he said, and gentlemen: I do not wish to make a long speech, because we haven t the time now for anything but work. However, I am certain that I voice the opinion of every man here when I express our appreciation of the incomprehensibility of the beauty of the instruction our friend has vouchsafed us. Especially illuminating are the lady s remarks upon statistics as compared to loot. It recalls to our minds, I am sure, the saying of Thucydides, that the only thing loot needs to succeed is to have itself backed up by statistics. And in the present work, if we wish to avoid the rift in the loot, we shall likewise have to steer clear of statistics. As to the five names given, all I have to say is that if Arthur Landers catches fish, he has no stove to cook them on. If...
